If you have concerns about the safety of some airplane models or simply have moral reservations about supporting companies that have put profits ahead of the public welfare, you may want to take action to try to improve this situation by contacting the airlines that you use and request them to create a reservation booking option that allows you to select airplane models that you do NOT want to fly on and to also back this up with fully refundable tickets should they try to violate your booking requirements. This way the airlines will receive public feedback to better enable them to address public welfare and moral concerns when making their airplane purchasing decisions.
